

Primary Care Providers: The Key to Healthy Aging

People who go to the doctor generally live longer and have fewer health problems. You may feel like you only need to check in when illness strikes but building a relationship with a PCP can make a significant difference in your well-being, especially as you get older. Read about the ways PCPs can help detect potential health problems before they become serious issues.

"Dr. Michael Zozzaro was extremely thorough and compassionate and took the time to explain everything to me. He also made sure I was comfortable with any decisions, future planning, and told me how to contact him with any questions if I was feeling unsure. He really went above and beyond. I was very happy with the experience and will definitely be keeping him as my regular ENT!"
